ROUND TWO: CONCURRENT SESSIONS

2020 Census: What Your City Needs to Know to Get an Accurate Count
9:15 a.m. - 10:30 a.m.
Canary Ballroom 1

In striving to count every person, the 2020 census will impact every city and every household in the nation. Currently, it is estimated that Florida has a high risk for undercounting. An accurate census ensures fair representation at all levels of the government, reliable data for research and appropriate municipal funding. Census numbers determine the annual allocation of billions of federal dollars to both state and local governments. It is paramount for municipal leaders to understand how your city, town or village will be counted, what communities are considered “hard-to-count” and how citizens can respond. This workshop will guide municipal leaders on what’s new for the 2020 census, including new ways to respond to the census, and ways city leaders can assist to better ensure your communities are accurately counted in the 2020 census.

Moderator: Philip E. Walker, Commissioner, City of Lakeland

Speaker: Marilyn Stephens, Assistant Regional Census Manager, U.S. Census Bureau

Smart Cities: What’s Your Strategy?
9:15 a.m. - 10:30 a.m.
Canary Ballroom 2

The term “Smart City” has an ever-evolving definition, and city leaders know that strategy is the key component. Smart Cities are focused on delivering a sustainable, prosperous and inclusive future through technology and other means. This session will explore the differences that a Smart City strategy can mean for your community, depending on your specific needs. Hear from city managers who are at different stages of their own community’s journey to become a smarter city and leave with ideas for your city, town or village’s strategy.

Karen Freeman-Wilson is mayor of Gary, Ind., and president of the National League of Cities. As NLC president, she is leading the organization to focus on four priority areas: helping city leaders tackle the housing crisis; uplifting legacy cities; creating communities for all generations; and encouraging civic engagement. Through these four pillars and a national Love My City campaign, Freeman-Wilson and NLC will engage city leaders to create a more meaningful bond between communities and their residents. She also leads NLC’s advocacy efforts.

Switching the Code
The state of public discourse in this country has deteriorated in recent years. It seems many leaders in government, in business and especially opinion leaders on social media have forgotten (or never learned) how to discuss difficult issues in ways that invite participation from a diversity of perspectives. We can do better ... much better. Youth council peers from around the state will engage in a dynamic, highly interactive process exploring possible cures for public discourse gone off the rails. We’ll identify a set of obstacles, then utilize the Open Space Meeting model to have the conversations you want to have to enhance your abilities to lead the conversation and influence the process.

Facilitator: Sharon Berrian, Director, Member Relations, Florida League of Cities
Instructor: Scott Paine, Ph.D., Director, Leadership Development and Education, Florida League of Cities
